History

Founded in 1984, Epsidon Technology Distribution (Pty) Ltd, trading as First Distribution, started business as an innovator in the IT technology space by writing backup software and designing a QIC-02 tape streamer interface card. The TEAC tape streamer mechanism became the base for the Epsidon Tape Streamer Backup System, which was sold primarily to the European market, as well as Australia, the USA and a smaller percentage to the Southern African market.

The high volume of TEAC tape mechanisms purchased, led to a proposal from TEAC that the company distribute its floppy drives. As the business grew, more and more products were brought on board, including motherboards, I/O cards, display cards and cases, and these components were distributed to the reseller community. Due to customer demand for high quality white boxes, First Distribution started assembling its own white box product which was branded the Epsidon PC.

Concurrent with the IBM brand continuing to grow to more than 50% of the total company business. From early 2000, First Distribution’s focus became almost exclusively IBM branded product which enjoyed substantial growth, ultimately leading to the gradual discontinuation of the white box brand.

In 2002, IBM South Africa appointed First Distribution as a distributor for the full range of IBM Software product, thus completing First Distribution’s IBM product offering. In 2013, we are celebrating our 18th year of successful collaboration with IBM.

In 2005, First Distribution opened a Networking business unit, which distributes cable, fibre, and edge-of-network products. During 2009, a strategic decision was made to diversify the brands that First Distribution offers to its business partners.

This started with the Samsung LFD distribution agreement in April 2009, with a product range that complements First Distribution’s offering to its retail, partners, and becoming a substantial brand within the company.

An exclusive agreement for South Africa was entered into with Oracle on 1 December 2009.

Following this and the acquisition of Sun Microsystems by Oracle in 2009, Oracle Hardware was added to First Distribution’s portfolio for distribution in July 2010.

First Distribution’s next new brand was VMware, commencing trading on the 1st of March 2010. While First Distribution had already been distributing VMware via the IBM OEM agreement for many years, the new agreement directly with VMware has enabled First Distribution to use its extensive VMware skills with a new set of business partners that have previously not sold IBM or who are hardware “agnostic”. This has been an extremely successful agreement, culminating in First Distribution winning the “2010 VMware Distributor of the Year” award, after only trading for ten months.

EMC and RSA were added in July 2010. EMC sales have grown phenomenally, and First Distribution is proud of the success it has achieved with this brand in the Enterprise and SMB markets.

A hosting division was created with the signing of the First Distribution Microsoft SPLA distribution agreement on 1 March 2011. Parallel to this, First Distribution also signed the VMware VSPP hosting agreement. This specialist team focuses on hosting solutions to the business partner community.

Veeam and Commvault agreements were signed in early 2011 and these two fantastic offerings have formed part of the First Distribution virtualisation ecosystem.

First Distribution has continued aggressively expanding its vendor portfolio, adding multiple world-class brands over the last few years including McAfee, Huawei, VCE, LG, Riverbed and most recently Lenovo.

May of 2014 saw First Distribution leading the market in cloud in launching First for Cloud, the country’s first cloud services brokerage. Seizing the opportunity offered by the growth of cloud in the IT industry, First for Cloud leverages First Distribution’s strong and well-established relationships through connections to top-class cloud providers, offering resellers and their end-user customers easy access to a wide array of the world’s very best cloud services.

First Distribution has continued aggressively expanding its vendor portfolio, adding multiple world-class brands over the last few years including Huawei, VCE, Lenovo, Riverbed, Amazon Web Services (AWS), Avaya, Veritas, and most recently, Hitachi Data Systems (HDS).

First Distribution was also awarded entry into Microsoft’s prestigious Cloud Solution Provider (CSP) programme in 2016, allowing the distributor to provide direct billing, sell combined offers and services, as well as directly provision, manage and support Microsoft cloud offerings.

Over thirty years in business and a well-constructed portfolio of product offerings and partnerships position First Distribution as a market leader in the development of world class IT solutions, using premium brands to offer our customers unrivalled products and services for their clients.

In March 2020, First Distribution saw a gap in the market to expand its service and product offering into the security and surveillance space. The expansion included the distribution agreements with many top tier security vendors giving access to video surveillance, and IoT devices. With our already established partner network, and our unprecedented relationships with datacentre products we are expecting to see significant growth in this area of out business.
